The unemployed of Frankfort township will be given an opportunity to secure work for the next 90 days as the result of the unemployed work project for Frankfort township which has just been approved.

The work to be done consists of improving, drainage, repairing, building culverts and bridges, grubbing brush and hedge, grading and stoning roads.

Unemployed men in Frankfort Township will be employed on this work which is to begin April 10.

The project has been approved by A. R. Lord, administrator of Work and Rehabilitation.

Mr. Cappel received notice from John G. Sengenberger, Supt., of Work Relief of Will county of the approval of the project, this week.

Tinley Woman's

Club Holds A Social Affair

Another delightful social affair of the Tinley Park Woman's Club was held Monday afternoon, when Mrs. K. Bagby entertained in her home at a Silver Tea, for the benefit of the Cancer Research Fund.

The hours were from two to five and the hours before tea was passed most pleasantly in sewing, visiting and enjoying a lovely program. The latter consisted of two piano solos, "Auf Flugelndes Gesenges," by Liszt and "Nocturne" by Scriabine, the latter by the left hand alone. These were played by Mrs. Carl Panknin in her most talented and professional way. They were greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Carl Winsor in her usual lovely and also professional way, sang, "Irish Love Song" and "At Dawning". Tinley Park Woman's Club is very fortunate in having two such talented and professional members. Mrs. Panknin accompanied Mrs. Winsor on the piano.

Mrs. Don C. Hall of Mokena, who has spent all her life on the stage and in the show business gave two readings, "Aunt Shaw's Pet Jug", and "The Little Brown Hands". They were pleasingly given as Mrs. Hall has been a dramatic reader all her life and these pieces have been remembered by her for many, many years. To those who find it difficult to remember, that fact was outstanding.

Tea was served in the dining room from a table covered with a beautifully embroidered and cluney lace linen cloth. The center piece was a black glass bowl containing flowers with a black glass double candle stick on each side holding white tall candles. Both black and green tea was served accompanied with delicious wafers, cookies and candies. Mrs. Omer Ebenhack and Mrs. Wm. Semmler poured.

After the serving Mrs. Frank Baldwin played on the piano a number of selections in her own unique way. After that Mrs. Don C. Hall again spoke, telling of her many experiences in the show business, also at the Century of Progress in 1933 and 1934, where she and Mr. Hall were located in the "Days of 49" the Irish Village and with the North Western exhibit in the Transportation Bldg. Mrs. Hall also told of the large repertoire of plays and entertainments which her family have. In Mrs. Woodrich taught school in district 138, Orland township, for 10 years, and was a much loved teacher. She enjoyed teaching and went to great pains to explain and show the pupils everything she could in the line of learning and school work. She will be greatly missed by her pupils.

Wolf Road Routing Not At Issue

Question of whether the Wolf road paving shall go thru the timber land of C. M. Cleveland between Mokena and route 22 already has been decided in county court and is not at issue in pending circuit court injunction proceedings, A. H. Krusemark, special assistant state's attorney states.

Mr. Krusemark's explanation follows a series of resolutions published by various wild life societies, evidently aiming to influence public opinion against construction of a road thru the timber. Cleveland, the owner, is opposed to bisection of the land by a highway.

However, Judge Win Knoch of Wheaton, presiding in county court six months ago over a condemnation proceeding filed by Will county to secure a right of way thru Cleveland's woods, disposed of all questions involving alleged destruction of the beauty of the land, Mr. Krusemark says in his statement.

"The condemnation proceeding had reached the point where all that remained to do was to call a jury and assess Mr. Cleveland's damages." States Mr. Krusemark. "Objections to alleged impairment of the land as a wild life center were over-ruled by the court."

When the condemnation action had reached that point, however, the directors of Frankfort township schools—Mr. Cleveland being one of the directors—filed an injunction action in circuit court, asking that the county be restrained from prosecuting the condemnation.

The injunction complaint alleged that the county proposed to route the road not only thru the timber but thru school property as well to a junction with route 22. The county answered that school property would not be touched by the road and that the directors were claiming property to which they could not prove title.

"The road will go thru the Cleveland timber in any event, regardless of the outcome of the injunction action," Mr. Krusemark said. "If necessary, the road will be curved around the property which the directors say is owned by district school 186. On behalf of the county, I believe this fact should be known. It apparently is not known by the organizations which have been opposing condemnation of the Cleveland timber."

Hearing of the injunction action, in which school directors seek to secure a permanent order restraining the county from routing the road as proposed, is pending before Judge E. L. Wilson. It is expected to try the case within the next two weeks.

CANDIDATES ADDRESS UNEMPLOYED AT MOKENA THURS. NIGHT

New Lenox Plans 18000 Hours Cutting Thistles; Other Plans

New Lenox citizens are making a determined effort to perfect a work relief program and at a meeting held Wednesday in the New Lenox school auditorium the following action was taken:

Arranging for 18000 hours work cutting Canada thistles on public and private lands in New Lenox township.

Appointment of a committee consisting of A. W. Walsh, Cleve Hollsten, Lenn Rought, George J. Hacker, Lowell Holt, Fred A. Francis and Senator K. J. Barr to take up the matter of having the highway from Route 44 built north thru New Lenox into Homer township to connect with 143rd street. This road project will come under the Federal Aid plan for highways.

Creating a central planning committee. Appointment of a committee to consider advisability of community building. Another committee was named to take up the matter of permanent subsistence with truck gardening and poultry raising thru a co-operative or planned market.

Mr. Francis advises that farmers on relief can now secure drought loans. Applications for such loans are to be made thru the county relief officials.

Next Tuesday Is Election Day

Next Tuesday April 22 will be election day and in some towns real hot elections are in view.

In Frankfort township the big fight centers on the office of highway commissioner, for which there are three aspirants, Emil D. Cappel, present commissioner and Louis Lauffer of Mokena and G. A. Hossbach of Frankfort, are the candidates.

For the first time in many years Frankfort township is voting for a tax collector. George Mager is a candidate for this office and has no opposition.

In Green Garden township the contention is for the offices of supervisor and highway commissioner. Alvin Bruggeman is the candidate for supervisor on the Republican ticket and Wm. C. Bettenhausen is a candidate for the same office on the People's ticket.

Wm. H. Pauling is the Republican nominee for highway commissioner and John C. Harnack is the People's party choice for this office.

In New Lenox township only three candidates are to be elected on the Town ticket. The Candidates are: For supervisor, Fred A. Francis; for highway commissioner, A. W. Walsh; for school trustee, Ray Osmus. There is no opposition.

ORLAND TOWNSHIP HAS ONLY ONE CANDIDATE

Orland township will have the most quiet election held there in years, only a school trustee is to be elected and he has no opposition. Instead of holding the polls open all day, the polls will be open in the first precinct in the village hall in Orland Park from 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Chas. F. Burkhardt is the lone candidate for the lone office of school trustee of Orland township.

TALKING MOVIES AT NEW LENOX ARE GOING OVER GOOD

FAMOUS TALKING MOVIE "KING OF KINGS" COMING TO FRANKFORT

The famous talking movie, "King of Kings", which had a long run in the larger cities of the country, has been secured for presentation at the St. Peters Evangelical church in Frankfort on Saturday night, April 20 and on Easter Sunday night April 21. Emergency Work Program Director to Speak At Mokena Next Tuesday Evening

Citizens of Frankfort township have an opportunity on Tuesday evening April 2, to hear Dr. Martin H. Bickham, director of Program planning for the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission in a discussion of the current relief situation.

The meeting will be held in the Mokena school auditorium and will convene at 7:30 p. m. A large attendance of business and civic leaders and public officials of the township is expected, as Dr. Bickham is not only well qualified to discuss the Illinois relief program because of his present direct connection but is a leading national authority on work relief.

Business and civic leaders and public officials of surrounding near villages and townships are also urged to attend this meeting.

In his address, Dr. Bickham will bring an important message to those who are interested in the relief program as it is now being developed thruout the state and will analyze many of the present day relief problems in their relationship to conditions now existant in Frankfort township.

Because of his work in planning the expanded work relief program in Illinois since termination of the OWA last spring, Dr. Bickham is particularly familiar with the development of this program, its problems, aims, and purposes. Since becoming director of program planning for the Commission, he has travelled extensively thruout the state studying the many factors affecting the state's relief problem. In making these studies of the social and economic backgrounds of the various sections of the state, he has conferred with public officials, business and civic leaders and with persons on relief rolls, and has consulted original sources of material on agricultural and industrial conditions. He will use many of these first hand studies as a foundation for his address Tuesday evening.

In addition to this address there will also be music.

Mark the date, next Tuesday, and be sure to attend. No admission charge and no collection.

To the Voters of Frankfort Township

I have served this township for the past 11 years. During my service the township has built about 25 miles of hard road taking all the people out of the mud. There are still some roads to be connected. The state has built 1 1/2 miles of gravel road for the township. The county has built 10 miles of concrete. The state has built three subways in the township. Three gas and oil lines have been built thru the township. I have been connected with all this work in one way or another. Frankfort township has the lowest tax rates in Will County and I wish to call the attention of the voters to the fact that the township has all bills paid up to date.

I have always tried to be of aid and service to both villages in this township, as well as to the schools and churches.

I am a candidate for re-election to the office of Highway Commissioner of Frankfort Township and I solicit and will greatly appreciate your support at the town election to be held next Tuesday, April 2nd. EMIL D. CAPPEL

Pointing out that Illinois farmers lost thousands of dollars each year through the presence of dodder weed in lespedeza, Walter W. McLaughlin, director of the state department of agriculture, advised planting of first quality seeds as a means of curtailing the heavy losses.

If Illinois would tear down its 10,000 "little red schoolhouses" and erect a few hundred modern buildings in their place, the annual education bill would be less and the pupils would fare better. That was the message from the Illinois State Teachers' association to Governor Horner's educational commission as the latter group held its first meeting.

Total receipts collected by the liquor revenue division, state department of finance, during February amounted to $480,706.88. It was announced by Director K. L. Ames, Jr. Sales of revenue stamps and taxes paid on gallonage basis totaled $467,525.70 for the month and license fees accounted for $13,181.18. Beer produced $149,154.15 of the February revenue and alcohol and spirits $297,935.25.

Gov. Henry Horner presented medals to three Illinois high school students who were named winners in a statewide essay contest conducted by the governor's committee on citizenship and naturalization. Loretta Wright, Leiland high school, received a gold medal for first place; Esther Maland, Somonauk, a silver medal for second place, and James Tobin, University high school, Urbana, a bronze medal for third.

A total of $421,885.18 has been allotted to Illinois counties from motor fuel tax paid into the state treasury during the month of February. K. L. Ames, Jr., director of finance, state of Illinois announced in a report to Gov. Henry Horner. Of the total $202,700 was held in reserve by the state for interest and retirement of the $20,000,000 emergency relief bond issue and $41,590 for interest and retirement of the $30,000,000 relief bond issue.

Three men, Henry Hittlet, Taylorville; Russell Carnahan Ramsey, and Wayne Logue of Decatur are in the Christian county jail awaiting grand jury action on charges of burning a business building in Pana in April, 1934. The building was owned by the late Thomas Keliger, Logue's father-in-law, and was insured for $5,000. Logue was one of the administrators of the estate. Hittlet and Carnahan are said to have confessed Logue hired them to do the job for $200.

Thousands of acres of rich farm land in Illinois and other states in the lower Mississippi river valley were inundated as flood waters continued to rise in the wake of three days of incessant rainfall. More than 500 refugees were rescued in the Poplar Bluff section of Missouri. Appeals for workers and funds were sent from that district to the National Red Cross organization. A National Guard company patrolled a nearby levee. The flood situation in southern Illinois was acute. Families were moved out of outlying districts of Harrisburg and its suburbs as streams, fed by the recent heavy rains, continued to spread out over the low areas.

Five hundred and sixteen Illinois farms have been refinanced by Gov. Henry Horner's agricultural conciliatory committee from July 1, 1934, to March 1, 1935. B. W. DeBord, state supervisor, reported to Walter W. McLaughlin, director of agriculture. On a total indebtedness of $6,552,706.22, the farms involved were refinanced for $4,581,740.92, an adjustment of $1,970,965.30. Although a short month, the February work of the committee set two records—the refinancing of 116 farms, the highest number of cases handled in any month, and the settling of the largest case in its history. The report shows the 116 farms with a total indebtedness of $1,335,005.54 were refinanced for $886,860.15, a scale down of $508,145.39. Cost of settlements averaged $18.87 a case.

The method of selling tangible personal property determines whether freight, delivery or transportation charges are part of the sale price and are to be included in computing liability under the retailers' occupation tax act, the state department of finance announces. In a special ruling on the subject, the department held that where a seller contracts to deliver tangible personal property or is obligated under the contract to pay transportation charges to a designated place, the expense must be included in the selling price, in which event it is not deductible by the seller in computing his tax. If the seller, however, contracts to sell property f. o. b. origin, title passing at such point to the buyer, who pays the transportation costs, then the charges are not a part of the selling price and are not to be included by the vendor in computing his tax. The department announced that these principles will apply irrespective of whether such costs are separately billed by the seller.

Ernest D. Patrick, former president of the Marengo (Ill.) National bank, and one of the first hard road advocates in northern Illinois, is dead at Rockford, of heart disease. He was sixty-six years old.

A delegation from Montgomery county conferred with Robert Kingery, director of the state department of public works and buildings, to request an improved highway on the 16-mile stretch from Raymond to Nokomis. The director told the delegation the plan would be referred to the state division of highways for consideration in its future road building program.

REVIEW

Lessons From the Life and Letters of Peter.

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 5:6-11; II Peter 3:14-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and for ever. II Peter 3:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Peter Was Old.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Learning With Peter.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Peter Became a Great Leader.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Peter Did to Spread Christianity.

The method of review is always determined by the grade and capacity of the class and the genius of the teacher. The suggestions made largely apply to the senior and adult classes. A good method of review will be to cast up to view the following great experiences in Peter's life:

I. Peter's First Meeting With Christ (John 1:40-42).

This involves his conversion and call. As a result of the Baptist's testimony two of John's disciples left him and followed Jesus. Andrew, one of these, when he knew Christ because of having abode with him, brought his brother Peter to Jesus. Andrew desired that Peter should have a knowledge of Jesus, not merely through his testimony, but through personal experience. Andrew did a great piece of work, for Peter became one of the pillars of the church. Later Peter was called with Andrew to become fishers of men (Mark 1:16-18). The first call of Jesus was for salvation. Because he heeded the call to salvation, he now is called to definite service.

II. Peter's Great Confession (Matt. 16:13-28).

The disciples had been with the Lord for several years. They had heard his wonderful words and witnessed his mighty works. And since Jesus was soon to go to the cross, it was necessary for the disciples to have a true conception of him. In order to help them into the right conception, Christ provoked this confession from Peter as the spokesman for the group of disciples. Peter confessed Christ's messiahship and deityship. The burning question then, as well as for the present hour, is, "What think ye of Christ?"

III. Peter's Denial (Mark 14:27-72). A better statement would be "Peter's Downfall." Peter's confession showed him to occupy a high position. From that lofty eminence to the depth of emphasizing a lie by means of foul oaths is a long way. The steps are clear and should constitute a solemn warning to all today:

1. Over-weening self-confidence (vv. 29-32).
2. Sleeping at the post of duty (vv. 32-37).
3. Neglect of prayer (v. 38).
4. Service in the energy of the flesh (v. 47).
5. Following Jesus afar off (v. 54).
6. Seeking comfort among the Lord's enemies (v. 67).
7. Open denial (vv. 68-72).

Peter's trouble really began when he shrank from the way of the cross.

IV. Peter's Restoration (John 20:1-10; 21:11-19).

As there were seven steps in Peter's downfall, so there were seven steps in his restoration.

1. Christ's prayer for Peter (Luke 22:31, 32).
2. The look of Jesus (Luke 22:61, 62).
3. Christ's message through the women (Mark 16:7).
4. A personal interview with the risen Lord (Luke 24:34).
5. Peter's open confession of love (John 21:11-17).
6. His work given back (John 21:17, 18).
7. Willingness to suffer for Christ (John 21:18, 19).

V. Peter at Pentecost (Acts 2:1-42).

Peter, with the rest of the disciples, came into a new experience at Pentecost. They came to know the outpouring of the Holy Spirit as the fulfillment of Joel's prophecy (Joel 2:28-32).

VI. The Conversion of Cornelius (Acts 10:1-48).

While Peter had the definite experience of Pentecost, he had not yet come to know the real meaning of the church. He was ignorant of that which God revealed through Paul (Eph. 3:1-5). He knew that a tremendous change had come. He saw the old order passing. It required the visitation of God to him by means of the sheet let down from heaven to show that the middle wall of partition had now been broken down and that Gentiles who accepted the finished work of Jesus Christ were accepted on high the same as the Jew.

Searcheth Out Perfection

Surely there is a vein for the silver, and a place for the gold where they fine it. Iron is taken out of the earth, and brass is molten out of the stone. He setteth an end to darkness, and searcheth out all perfection; the stones of darkness, and the shadow of death.—Job 28, 1-3.

Happiness

Let me but have time to my thoughts, but leisure to think of heaven and grace to my leisure; and I can be happy in spite of the world.—Joseph Hall.

Washington

by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—Air pilots use an expression that I want to appropriate in connection with a discussion of the country's economic situation and its relation to the administration policies and plans. The pilots refer to "low visibility" and "low ceiling" when they want to say that they cannot see far in the distance. It seems to me that the clarity, or lack of it, with respect to current economic conditions warrants the use of the term "low visibility"—if any credence whatsoever is to be placed in the statements and activities of business leaders.

Government agencies by the dozen have been issuing rapid fire reports in recent weeks showing how industrial production is improved, how the price level has shown signs pleasing to industry, if not to the consumers, and how the volume of bank clearings is progressing upward. Bank deposits were seven billion dollars higher at the end of 1934 than at the end of 1933. The Reconstruction Finance corporation is having difficulty in keeping its borrowers from paying back the loans and the Securities and Exchange commission recently was made very happy by application of a great packing company to list forty-five million dollars in new securities.

The treasury has been pursuing what is regarded as orthodox financial policies and a good many other agencies appear to be veering away from the leftists' course that so long dominated Roosevelt policies. All of these, it seems, ought to be reassuring to business, whether that business be the great corporations or the little tradesmen in the corner groceries. But there has been a fly in the ointment and that seems to be the reason why masses of capital and a goodly percentage of the country's population shares uncertainty about the future economic condition.

I have sought answers to this puzzle in many quarters and I have had many different explanations. It is made to appear, however, from the weight of opinion that I have gathered that the relief rolls are the cause of this lack of faith. It has been recorded previously that approximately twenty-two million persons, about one-sixth of our population, are living on relief. This staggering total, the highest ever known, obviously represents a basic weakness somewhere and the administration is seeking to locate that weakness. This total has been reached by a steady growth. It has not come suddenly. The circumstance, therefore, has led many individuals to the conviction that Mr. Roosevelt's reform measures are failures.

Perhaps it is a lack of understanding on the part of business that prompts it to keep its pen in its pocket and its check-book closed under these conditions. It may be that business leaders have failed to read the possibilities represented by increased production and the other signs of an improved economy. Nevertheless, business apparently has found it difficult to see far or clearly into the future. It seems to look upon the economic condition as having a "low ceiling" and "low visibility."

Washington correspondents were startled in the President's press conference the other day when he let it be known that he plans four additional messages to congress this session, not including his recent bitter denunciation of the holding companies when he asked that action be had on that bill. It was not the number of messages that surprised the correspondents; it was the fact that the President said with some frankness that he did not know what subjects would be treated in them. To most of the observers it seemed wholly reasonable that the President should be unwilling to outline those messages, but it was incomprehensible that he should admit his inability to say what subjects would be handled.

After that information came out of the White House there was a noticeable sinking in the optimism of a great many men who count for something in the country's business structure. Most of them said frankly that they did not know which way to turn. Among their numbers were more who believed sincerely that the President was giving up some of his numerous New Deal experiments and was proceeding on ground which the conservative thought considers to be solid. The reaction to work of this kind always has been and always will be bad from the standpoint of the political party in power.

Added to the circumstances I have just mentioned, one should remember how congress normally is unpopular with the business community. In many years past I have heard the plaint of business representatives in Washington asking or urging for adjournment. Business men normally feel that the less work congress gets done and the sooner it leaves the halls of the Capitol, the better conditions will be. The same is true now, only more so.

It may as well be admitted that the current session of congress is here for a considerable number of weeks. This is true for several reasons. In the first instance, many of the members feel that they want to be legislators and not rubber stamps any longer. There is no longer the overwhelming fear among congressmen of the President's power. They have shown this several times lately, including the forty-nine day battle over the public works bill.

Feeling their independence again, members of the house and senate have begun to press for action on legislation carrying out their own ideas. Much of this runs counter to administration ideas on legislation. Further clashes are inevitable. When there are conflict of plans in congress you can expect to see a long-drawn-out session, and since this is not an election year, there is no need for the members to rush home to mend their political fences.

It is not strange, therefore, that business as a whole is worried about congress. The business leaders themselves insist that it is not strange that they are worried about the secrecy which surrounds the President's plans. The two circumstances, taken together, obviously serve as a brake on the wheels of industry because now as always in the past business will not risk the last vestige of its capital resources unless it can be assured of stability.

While the Democrats, the party in power, are floundering, the Republicans lie wholly dormant. Seldom in my experience in Washington has the opposition party been as useless as the Republicans now seem to be. They are making no effort at all to gather funds for use by Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican national committee in taking advantage of vulnerable spots in the Democratic armor. In fact, they have left Mr. Fletcher rather high and dry and when he attempts to do anything one faction or another shoots harder at him than at its natural rivals, the Democrats.

I have heard expressions lately to the effect that Mr. Fletcher has a golden opportunity at hand. He is in the enviable position of being able every time he is criticized by his own partisans to point out that the help they are giving him is worse than nil and that criticism under such a circumstance does not become them. The thought is that Mr. Fletcher by taking the bull by the horns, becoming militant and mapping out a program with which his wide knowledge of politics equips him, could become actually the dominant Republican force in this country. Thus far Mr. Fletcher has sat back in his easy chair and has taken all the darts. Some observers are asking how long that can continue and the Republican party remain alive.

Early in the Roosevelt administration the Republican policy was to avoid criticism of the Democratic leadership at all times. They declared, and openly announced their views, that if they criticized Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal they would be characterized as obstructionists. If the New Deal failed the Democrats surely would place the blame on the Republican opposition. But political writers here tell me that Mr. Roosevelt's political honeymoon has been over quite a while and that there is, in their opinion, no need for the Republicans longer to stick their heads in the sand and see nothing.

As the administration gets its hands on fresh supplies of money, a strong demand has set up for more concrete highways. There seems to be almost a propaganda in favor of constructing concrete highways here, there and everywhere, including two or three or four transcontinental, high speed roadways.

The new public works bill carries a considerable sum for highway construction and it is quite natural that dealers in road materials and equipment want to get hold of it. My inquiries among road-building authorities lead me to believe, however, that the use of these funds ought to be examined closely and any program that is mapped out should be the result of careful study. Around the Department of Agriculture there is a chronic complaint that too many through highways and not enough farm-to-market roads have been constructed. If that be correct, the authorities tell me, then the concrete road-building program will have to be revamped or else there will be hundreds of miles of concrete roadway constructed at an expense so great that it can be called reckless waste.

Some years ago the bureau of public roads made a statistical study which indicated that a concrete roadway, as distinguished from other hard-surface highways, was unjustified unless the daily volume of automobile traffic approximated fifteen hundred cars. It is to be remembered that a concrete roadway costs several times as much as when other materials are used in hard-surface construction. So the public roads statistician figured out the life of a roadway built of less expensive materials would be of sufficient length to warrant use of the cheaper material where the volume of travel was low.

MAN NOT ALWAYS HELD ENEMY BY
WILD CREATURES

There was once a time of universal friendship, or at least mutual tolerance, between man and the animals, declares Dr. Walter Hough, curator of anthropology of the Smithsonian institution. This situation is contrary to the theory that in the early days there was mutual antagonism between man and the lower creatures, causing a "tooth and claw" relationship.

"There are still remnants of this original 'Eden' in isolated parts of the world," states Doctor Hough, who has been tracing the method by which man domesticated animals. The trail of most of the domesticated animals leads back to central Asia. There, Doctor Hough believes, early man had a temperament especially adapted to inspire friendship and confidence among his fellow creatures.

"Observers in new countries," Doctor Hough says, "have recorded with surprise the lack of fear by animals. . . . There still remain in remote parts zones of peace, where animals are unaccustomed to fear. One such zone was found in Tibet by naturalists of the British Mount Everest expedition. . . . Another instance was called to my attention by a member of our own staff, who observed the lack of fear among the animals during his exploration of St. Lawrence island, Alaska.

"The above leads to the generalization that domestication is not the province of cruel and fear-engendering men. Domestication came about in zones of peace and was accomplished by peaceful men through kindly methods. The coming together of such fortuitous circumstances as animals suited for domestication and men of the peaceful, patient type undoubtedly was found in Asia, where our domestic animals originated."

THEIR CARS, TRUCKS AND TRACTORS
TO PULL THEM THROUGH MUD,
SAND OR BAD ROADS OF ANY KIND

You don't need chains, for these Ground Grip Tires will pull you through where chains would leave you stranded in mud or sand. Firestone Ground Grip Tires for motor cars, trucks and tractors give the farmer greatest economy ever offered, and relief from being stranded on mud roads and in soft ground.

Why can Firestone give you these wonderful new tires with the wide tread that withstands this terrific pull and strain, and still does not destroy the cord body? Firestone can do this because the body of this tire is built with Gum-Dipped cords. TRUE GHOST STORIES

By Famous People

By ED WYNN
Comedian.

"IN MY play, 'The Perfect Fool,' a few years ago, I performed what the public calls a mind-reading stunt. "Before I began my act, I always made sure to tell the audience that I did not believe in mind reading, that my act was the result of four years' study and mental training. I had to memorize, to develop a code with my assistant, of 2,100 words, and to know the names of all famous generals, the capitals of all countries, the names of steamships, etc.

"One evening after I, blindfolded, had been reading the numbers on bills for people, I heard, in the creaky tones of an old gentleman's voice, some one challenging me defiantly.

"You can't tell me what I have in my pocket."

"An elderly gentleman in the audience says I cannot tell what he has in his pocket," I repeated.

"How do you know I am elderly?" he retorted.

"You, sir," I began in a portentous voice, "have in your pocket a passport to Europe."

"Your name is W. L. Cowen; you are sailing late tonight on the steamship—"

"In the meantime, I was receiving by code, from my assistant in the aisle, the word Skythia. I knew that there had been some error, that there was no steamship by that name. As I groped for the right word, there flashed through my mind the headlines of the morning papers: "Steamship Scythia makes maiden voyage today."

"I finished the sentence, 'You are sailing on the steamship Scythia.'"

"Because I was annoyed at the man's antagonism to my work, I added:

"Moreover, you are going to have a bad voyage and you will never make another trip to Europe."

"Four weeks later I received a letter from England. It read:

"We, the undersigned, take the privilege of writing to you. We believe this to be a matter of world importance.

"We were in the audience the night you told a man that his name was W. L. Cowen and that he was sailing for Europe on the steamship Scythia. We, too, were sailing on the Scythia; we were being sent to England to do psychic research for the University of Pennsylvania.

"After your performance, we went to see if there was a Mr. Cowen on the boat's passenger list. We found there was not, but the next morning we saw his name on the additional list. That evening, we wanted to speak with him to discuss your reading; but he was sitting at the captain's table, and we decided to wait for a more opportune time. The following morning he was found dead in his cabin.

"We want to know if you had a psychic message that he would never take another trip to Europe.

"I put the letter down. To this day, any time I hear of anyone sailing to Europe, the thought of that coincidence comes to me and makes me shudder."

Use Dogs in Ghost Hunt in "Haunted" Farm House

Every night half a dozen armed men, accompanied by dogs, watch at a 400-year-old farmhouse, South Reston Hall, near Louth, Lincolnshire, England, because mysterious things had been reported happening there. The dogs are present because it is believed that canine senses are more sensitive to supernatural manifestations than are the senses of human beings.

Here are some of the strange, and at present unexplained, incidents which have occurred: Room thrown into confusion; food taken from the pantry; soot thrown down the chimneys; large holes made through a ceiling, and a bed slept in.

A young woman asserts that twice she has seen an "animal having a pointed nose and bushy tail." She fainted when she saw it. One theory is that an escaped monkey, hiding in a false roof of the house, is responsible, but a search failed to locate either a monkey or any other intruder.

The master of the East Lincolnshire Otter Hounds took his dogs and a terrier into the roof. Apparently scenting something, the terrier barked furiously at one spot, but nothing was found.

The strength of the intruder is an extraordinary feature. In a bedroom a sack filled with heavy material which had blocked the chimney for 50 years was thrown down to gain admission to the room.

Costliest Political Confab

The costliest political conference in history took place on "The Field of the Cloth of Gold," near Andres, France, in 1520 between Francis I and Henry VIII. Francis erected a magnificent palace, chapel and other buildings, all gold-decorated, for the entertainment of Henry and the nobility of England and France. Nothing, however, was accomplished in the 17 days. No one wanted to get very far away from a large fountain which, from morning until midnight, poured forth two kinds of wine.—Collier's Weekly.

Newly Designed Doughnut Million-Volt Generator

D. R. WILLARD H. BENNETT of Ohio State university's physics department, with his newly designed doughnut million-volt generator, for use in the study of nuclear disintegration. Because it is much smaller and less costly than the models previously used for the same voltage, the new generator is expected to greatly increase the possibilities for study of the atom and its nucleus. The generator will be used in operating a high vacuum tube at extremely high voltages, to produce high-speed particles which disintegrate nuclei of atoms and change the chemical elements. The new generator is of the electrostatic type and has a high voltage shield in the shape of a sphere with two holes on opposite sides. The shield is charged by means of a silk belt which passes through these holes.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am not one of those persons who believes everything told them. For that reason I am writing to you to find out if what I heard last night is true. I heard that the richest people in New York neglect their children. Tell me, is this true?

Yours truly,

ANN ARKIST.

Answer: What you heard is silly. Rich people do not neglect their children. They engage nurses to do that.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

What is meant by "A Gentleman Farmer"?

Yours truly,

Q. KUMBER.

Answer: A gentleman farmer is a man who raises nothing but his hat.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

During our natural history lesson, in school yesterday, our teacher said that about 8,000 elephants go every year to make white keys for pianos. If this is true, what do you think of it?

Sincerely,

E. KLIPSE.

Answer: I think it shows how far we have advanced in training animals.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

What is meant when they say a man has "horse sense"?

Truly yours,

JOCK KOY.

Answer: "Horse sense" is the thing which keeps a man from mortgaging his home to buy an automobile.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My mother and father had an argument. Ma said that Pa doesn't act the same as he used to before they were married, especially if they were on a train and passed through a tunnel. Why should men act differently, in a tunnel after marriage?

Sincerely,

I. M. A. MAY DIN.

Answer: Before marriage a fellow always kisses his girl in a tunnel. After marriage, when he gets in a tunnel, he takes a drink.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I saw a policeman stop an automobile and arrest the driver. The man wanted to know why he was arrested and the policeman said because he had only one eye. What charge can they place against a man driving a car because the man has only one eye?

Yours truly,

D. SEMBER.

Answer: He was probably arrested for driving because he had one lamp out.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

In an article I read in one of the morning papers I saw the following headlines: "Robbed by Comic-Opera Bandits." What in the world is meant by "Comic-Opera Bandits"?

Truly yours,

C. NARIO.

Answer: That means robbers who, after tying their victims so they can't move, use "Old Gags" to keep them quiet.

Bedtime Story for Children

REDWING THE BLACKBIRD GIVES WARNING

CREeping toward sleeping Danny Meadow Mouse Reddy Fox managed to keep quite out of sight of anyone in the Smiling Pool. But there was one person to whom Reddy gave no heed. In fact, Reddy did not see him at all. It was Redwing the Blackbird, sitting on top of an alder tree on the bank of the Smiling Pool. Redwing had not seen Reddy until the latter had almost reached the Smiling Pool. Then, happening to look in that direction, he had caught a glimpse of something red moving in the tall grass. You see, he was looking down and therefore could see what those on the ground or in the water could not see.

Now Redwing does not fear Reddy Fox. There is no reason why he should. But Redwing has no love for Reddy Fox. He knows that Reddy would gladly catch him if he could. So the instant he was sure that it was Reddy creeping through the tall grass, Redwing flew out directly above Reddy and began to scream. "Danger! Danger!" he screamed. "Here is Reddy Fox! Danger! Danger!"

At the first warning note from Redwing, Grandfather Frog dived into the Smiling Pool with a great splash. There wasn't any real need for him to do so because out on that big green lily pad of his, he was quite safe from Reddy. But Grandfather Frog always feels more comfortable in the water when any kind of danger is around. All along the shore of the Smiling Pool, half grown young frogs dived into the water in a panic. They knew what had brought Reddy over to the Smiling Pool.

Of course at the first note of Redwing's voice the eyes of Danny Meadow Mouse flew open. The instant he saw where Redwing was hovering in the air as he screamed he knew that Reddy Fox was just beneath him and that meant that Reddy was right back of Danny himself. What should he do?

He Had Caught a Glimpse of Something Red Moving in the Tall Grass.

Where should he run? To turn back would be to run right into Reddy's mouth. There wasn't a hiding place near. It was useless for him to try to outrun Reddy, for Reddy could catch him in two jumps. Was ever a meadow mouse in a more dreadful position? There was Reddy Fox behind him and the Smiling Pool in front of him. To Grandfather Frog, whose big goggle eyes showed just above the surface of the water, it looked as if Danny Meadow Mouse would soon be no more. He couldn't see one little chance for Danny to escape.

Death Ray Apparatus Aids Human Life

D. R. E. D. McALISTER of Smithsonian Institution is photographed with his death ray apparatus. Using ultra-violet—invisible light—rays from a quartz spectrograph, he determines what wave lengths are lethal. As it is adjusted it is lethal to ascarids (intestinal parasites). This machine, operated with a radiation wave of from 3,900 to 1,850 angstrom units, is lethal to many organisms. An angstrom is ten-millionth of a millimeter.

THE GIFT OF FRIENDSHIP

By ANNE CAMPBELL

MY FRIEND came home from far away,
And brought a gift to me,
But in my hand no hauble lay,
And there was nothing I could see.

She gave to me a cheering word,
A happy smile, a loving glance,
And in my heart new courage stirred
To conquer changing circumstance.

There is no gift that can be bought,
Or any work of art,
As precious as the one she brought;
The beauty of a friendly heart.

WHEN YOU TAKE A LAXATIVE

... use a spoon

It isn't what brand of laxative you take that's so important—it's the form. A liquid laxative can be taken in any required amount. If only a little is needed, you need never take a bit too much.

Doctors favor the easily measured liquid laxatives. Instead of any form that does not encourage variation from the fixed dose. A fixed dose may be an overdose for you—or your child.

Always remember this one thing about constipation: the secret of any real relief is reduced dosage.

Give the bowels only as much help as may be needed, and less help as the need grows less. You will find Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin an excellent aid in regulating the bowels. It contains senna and cascara (natural laxatives) and it will clear up any bilious, sluggish condition without upset. Delightful taste, and pleasant action. Your druggist has it.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE SOLDIERS "BONUS"

So you will not think that the World War Veteran is asking for something for nothing the following will give you a good idea of how the situation looks to him:

During the World War our Government made contracts with many firms for necessary war supplies and in each contract was a clause that the contract could be cancelled immediately when the war ceased. In spite of these cancellation clauses the Government paid to these war supplies contractors a "bonus" of about five billion dollars to repay them for remodeling their factories for peace time production after the war was over. When the bonus was paid it also gave the contractors six per cent interest from the date of cancellation to the date of payment. The Railroads of the country were taken over and operated by the Government during the War and they too were given a "bonus" to repay them for the loss suffered by the private investors while their property was out of their control. The Railroads received about two billion dollars and when it was paid they also received six per cent interest from the date the property went back to private control to the date of payment.

Then the Congress thought about giving the soldiers a "bonus" to repay them for their loss in wages while receiving one dollar a day for getting shot at, and in 1925 a bill was passed giving the World War Veterans the amount of one dollar a day for home service and one dollar and twenty-five cents a day for foreign service with a limit of five hundred days. To this was added twenty-five per cent and that amount, bearing only four per cent interest, was given to the veterans in the form of an Adjusted Service Certificate payable in 1945.

We were at war several months more than the five hundred day limit allowed in figuring the amount and many men were not released from service until several months after the signing of the Armistice.

But if the amount that was allowed to the Veteran was figured at six per cent interest the same as the other "bonuses" and if it was figured from the date of release from service instead of being effective in 1925, then the full amount of the Adjusted Service Certificate that the Veteran now holds would have been due in 1931.

The Veteran has no complaint to make about the payments made to the Contractors or the Railroads and he does not want to be considered a Treasury Raider as he is still just as loyal to his Country as he was during the War, but he does feel that he is entitled to the same consideration that was given to other payments made for the same purpose.

Instead of asking for something for nothing as some of the public thinks, he is only asking for something that is already four years overdue.

These facts were submitted at a recent American Legion meeting by Lionel Thorness, Commander of the Second District.

New York Journal, Boston American, Chicago American, Washington Times, Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph, etc.: "The most powerful and most active patriotic force in the United States is The American Legion. It is dedicated to the creed of Americanism. It is solidly aligned against Communism and every other imported 'ism'. It charts the course our government should steer, and must steer, if America's heritage is to be preserved. The nation may well congratulate itself that such an organization exists—a million strong—to warn it of perils at home or abroad, and to safeguard it against the foes of its own household."

Geraldine Alice Asher, aged 11 years, daughter of Jerry and Annabelle Asher former residents of the Elmore subdivision in Tinley Park, died Tuesday, March 20th at New Castle, Indiana from the effects of measles and tubercular meningitis.

She became confined to her bed on Friday, March 15th and was taken to the hospital in New Castle. She became delirious and passed away on March 20th. The body was brot to Fennville, Michigan on Thursday, March 21st and the funeral was held at Fennville Funeral Home. She was buried beside her mother and by her grand father Winnie Asher, Sr., who passed away, December 26th.

Geraldine was a girl of bright and sunny disposition and her death leaves a vacancy in the Asher home.

Mr. and Mrs. Asher lost a boy two years ago. Three members of the Asher family have passed away in two years. May God send His comfort to fill the hearts of these poor people who are struggling so hard to live against the depression and all the ills of life.

Geraldine Alice Asher was born in South Bend, Indiana on August 30th, 1924. Her mother passed on July 4, 1929, a victim of tuberculosis.

A precious one from us has gone,

A voice we loved is stilled;

A place is vacant in our home,

Which never can be filled.

FORD V-8

In A Class By Itself

THERE is no way to compare the Ford V-8 with any other car because there is no other car like it.

The Ford enables you to step up into the fine-car class in performance, beauty, comfort and safety. But there is no stepping up in price. That is kept down by Ford low-profit policies and unique manufacturing methods. These are as different as the car itself.

It takes eight cylinders to give the modern performance you need these days. The Ford is powered by a V-8 — the finest type of eight-cylinder engine. You have to pay more than $2000 for that in any other car.

Note: Occasionally we are going to publish the favorite stories of different pupils. The following is a favorite story of a member of the sophomore class. Guess who?

Solange by Alexander Dumas (Dr. Ledrus' Story of the reign of Terror.)

A man, named Albert, helped a girl's father to escape to England. The girl's name is Solange. Albert is using in research, the bodies and heads supplied (by the guillotine, which at this time is very much in use. Albert and Solange fell in love. One night we find Albert at work in his laboratory, which in reality is a chapel. It is storming. (The conclusion will follow.)

Suddenly I fancied I heard a voice! A voice at once soft and plaintive; a voice within the chapel, pronouncing the name of, Albert.

I was startled, Albert!

But one person in all the world addressed me by that name! Slowly I directed my weeping eyes around the chapel, which, the small, was not completely lighted by the feeble rays of the candle, leaving the nooks and angles in darkness, and my look remained fixed on the blood soaked sack near the altar with its hideous contents.

At this moment the same voice repeated the same name, only it sounded fainter and more plaintive. "Albert!"

I bolted out of my chair frozen with horror.

The voice seemed to proceed from the sack!

I touched myself to make sure that I was awake; then I walked toward the sack with my arms extended before me, but stark and staring with horror. I thrust my hand into it. Then it seemed to me as if two lips, still warm, pressed a kiss upon my fingers!

I had reached that stage of boundless terror where the excess of fear turns into the audacity of despair. I seized the head and, collapsing in my chair, placed it in front of me.

Then I gave vent to a fearful scream. This head, with its lips still warm, with eyes half closed, was the head of Solange!

I thought I should go mad.

Three times I called: "Solange! Solange! Solange!"

At the third time she opened her eyes and looked at me. Tears trickled down her cheeks; then a moist glow darted from her eyes, as if the soul were passing, and the eyes closed, never to open again!

I sprang to my feet a raving maniac. I wanted to fly: I knocked against the table; if fell. The candle was extinguished; the head rolled upon the floor, I fell prostrate, as if a terrible fever had stricken me down; an icy shudder convulsed me, and, with a deep sigh, I swooned.

The following morning at six the grave diggers found me, cold as the flagstone on which I lay.

Solange, betrayed by her father's letter, had been arrested the same day, condemned, and executed.

The head that had called me, the eyes that had looked at me, were the head, the eyes, of Solange!

THE SPIDER

In the nook of a sunny town-shack, Where Aristocrat-Creepers do dwell, An old spider, plain ugly and black Built himself a new residence-cell, As spiders do.

In the dark of a warm, moonless night Out of slime did he fashion his set: A trap, out of threads, filmy and white, An invisible, treacherous net, As spiders do.

Then contented and without a care, Lazy, lusty, lascivious, fat, He sat down in his new cobweb lair, To devour whom by chance he could get, As spiders do.

And thus Spider-Home meant Dead-Fly-Pass; For, no fly could set foot on the top Of the net, or a swift moving mass Knocked her down, sucked her blood ate her up, As spiders do.

THAT THE MIGHTY MAY PROSPER, THE POOR BLEED AND DIE. WHAT IS LIFE FOR THE SPIDER IS DEATH TO THE FLY.

THE WHITE STORE

"There is Only One White Store in Joliet"

CASS STREET

AN EASTER BUNNY LUNCHEON

WE are in a position to deny officially the rumor that all the Easter rabbits will be drawn out of hats by the Administration in Washington, D. C. It might be well if it were true, because some of the rabbits they have produced from hats in Washington have been very well worth while, but the Easter rabbits will come this year from wherever Easter rabbits usually come from. It was only an April first rumor, after all.

There is no truth either in the rumor that the Administration is prepared to supply alphabet soup for Easter Monday luncheons. They can use all the alphabet available right in Washington, and they are hoping to keep out of the soup entirely.

But there will be plenty of bunnies and eggs for Easter celebrations, whether Washington comes through with them or not, and, as this is a season of special rejoicing, we should make our Easter luncheons as gay as possible.

Have Your Guests All Ears

One way to make your guests all ears in anticipation and also at your Easter luncheon is to supply these furry addenda to their physiognomies yourself. Just make a pair of ears out of fairly stiff paper for them to draw on over their own, and fasten these artificial ears together with an elastic to reach around the back of the head so that they will stay in place. If you want to be more elaborate, you can cover the ears with fur, but they're harder to keep in place that way, and just plain paper ones of whatever color you choose will create a startling effect. Fringed crepe paper, if stiff enough, might serve for fur.

We don't know exactly what rabbits talk about, and the only data we know of on a rabbit's conversation is that of the mad March hare in Alice in Wonderland. So let's let the conversation remain spontaneous and concentrate on the details of the luncheon. You'll want Easter flowers on the table, of course, and lots of bunny favors and decorations. And here's what we would suggest for a bang-up meal:

Orange Flower Appetizer
Broiled Fillets of Beef Medallion
(Rounds of Toast, Broiled Pineapple, Diced Carrots and Pepper)
Duchess Potatoes
Buttered Lima Beans
Hot Finger Rolls
Apricot Sherbet on Angel Food Cake
Coffee

Here Are Tested Recipes

Orange Flower Appetizer: Cut skin from large seedless oranges, and cut out the sections without a particle of white fibre. Drain a can of green gage plums, remove stones and stuff centers with cream cheese. Have everything very cold. Arrange orange sections on crystal plates in flower shape and place a stuffed plum in the center.

Broiled Fillets of Beef Medallion: Broil six fillets of beef. Toast six rounds of bread and sauté six slices Hawaiian pineapple in butter. Place a round of toast on each serving plate, put a slice of pineapple on it and top with a fillet of beef. Dress with plenty of melted sweet butter. Now make a ring or border around the medallion with Diced Carrots and Pepper: Drain a No. 2 can of diced carrots, and cut two green peppers and one pimiento in small squares. Sauté carrots and pepper in four tablespoons butter until a golden brown. Add pimiento and cook a moment longer. Add two tablespoons chopped parsley and season with salt and pepper.

Apricot Sherbet: Drain a No. 2 can apricots, and to the apricot syrup add one tablespoon corn syrup and twelve marshmallows, and steam in a double boiler until marshmallows are dissolved. Cool, add the apricots pressed through a sieve and one tablespoon lemon juice. Pour into refrigerator tray, and stir occasionally until it begins to freeze. Then fold in two egg whites, beaten stiff with two tablespoons sugar, and continue freezing, stirring now and then to prevent formation of crystals. Serve on a piece of angel cake. (Mixture may be tinted a deeper yellow, if desired for your color scheme).

This lunch serves six, and if it doesn't make half a dozen people talk like March hares, it ought at least to satisfy them and make them make a noise like a rabbit!

DON'T KICK THAT HAT!

SILK hats are coming back this season.

Some are new and some have been in the possession of their owners so long that when they were taken out for inspection they were reluctantly consigned to the ash can. You may even find some out on the sidewalk about the first of next month, but, if you do, repress that impulse to take a swift kick at them. There's almost sure to be a brick underneath to greet your toe!

In like manner be wary of answering casual questions on that date. If someone affably inquires whether you would rather be a bigger fool than you look or look a bigger fool than you are, refrain from answering until you've thought it over for a while. He's merely sparring for an opening to convict you of being an April Fool.

Don't Bite Too Hard

Even foods have their pitfalls on the first of April. The salt has been known to find its way mysteriously into the sugar dish, and the sugar into the salt cellar, and various apparently edible substances have turned out not to be what they seem. Don't risk a tooth by biting too hard till you're sure.

In fact the only way to play safe is to plan your own dinner that day, and serve it at home, and, even then, strange things may happen. If your soup plate slowly tips up at one side before your unbelieving eyes, don't try to remember what you ate or drank that may have disagreed with you. Just feel beneath the tablecloth for a rubber bulb and the attendant tube through which some innocent looking member of your family is inflating it with air. Or, if you can't take a drink of water without having to flick

Cream of Corn and Mushroom Soup

Cook the contents of an 11-ounce can of corn, three cups milk, one large sliced onion, one small stalk celery and one bay leaf for fifteen minutes, then strain. Cut the contents of a 4-ounce can of mushrooms fine, and sauté in two tablespoons flour, and stir smooth. Add the mushroom liquor slowly, stirring till thick and creamy. Add to the hot milk mixture, and cook again till smooth and creamy. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and add one-half cup cream. Serve in cups.

The Main Dish and Dessert

Veal Medallions:

Cut the contents of two 7-ounce cans veal loaf in six even pieces, then shape and pat carefully with the hands into nice round flat patties. Add grated cheese to seasoned mashed potatoes to suit the taste, and pile lightly in round mounds on the veal patties. Place a thick slice of a few annoying drops off the immaculate lapels of your coat, carefully examine the pattern chased on the glass, and you may find some minute holes in it.

A Safe Dinner for Six
If you avoid these pitfalls and know of your own knowledge that the sugar and salt have remained in their proper receptacles, the following would be a safe dinner to serve for six people at home:

Sugared Strawberries
Cream of Corn and Mushroom Soup
Veal Medallions
Asparagus with Hollandaise Sauce
Dressed Cucumber, Radish and Green Pepper Rings
Bread Sticks
Frozen Fruit Pudding
Coffee
Mints Salted Nuts

nice ripe tomato on top of each, and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Bake in a hot—400-degree—oven for about 20 minutes.

Frozen Fruit Pudding: Press the fruit from a No. 2 can apricots through a sieve. Boil two-thirds cup sugar and one-half cup water three minutes, and cool; then add to the apricots. Add one and a half cups heavy cream. Half freeze the mixture, and then add one whole stuffed orange, chopped fine. Continue freezing.

The only ingredient in this dessert which you may find difficult to find, unless you order it in advance, is the stuffed orange. Ask your grocer about it, and he can get it for you. They come in jars, are very good, and add the final touch to this delectable pudding.

News From Springfield

—By—
Bernice T. Vander Vries
Representative Seventh District
Apparently exhausted by the labor involved in pouring into the legislative hopper about one thousand bills on every type of subject, the members of the General Assembly recessed until after the Chicago Mayoralty election. The election is however probably the main reason for the recess.

It was a great disappointment to many of the members that a recess was taken at this time. Those who were interested in school legislation were eager to have their bills passed and out of the way before administration measures and appropriations bills not yet introduced have the right of way.

Of interest to those residing in the Seventh District are the following school bills which must await the reconvening of the Assembly for further action:

House Bill No. 343. Foster—Amends sections 81 and 116 of the School Act by changing the forms of teachers wage orders so that if order not paid within a year from date of presentment to Treasurer, it will be paid by issuing a new order for principal and interest due. Referred to Committee on Education.

House Bill No. 260. Foster—Authorizes school districts having less than 150,000 inhabitants to create, set apart, maintain and administer a cash working fund. First reading.

House Bill No. 616. Foster and Sinnott. Provides that the separate tax levied by a school district to pay bonds and interest shall be extended without limitation as to rate or amount, if rate for amount levied by building purpose when added to rate needed to pay off bonds and interest exceeds maximum rate permitted for building purposes, the county clerk shall reduce the rate. If rate for payment of bonds and interest alone exceeds the building rate it shall nevertheless be extended and no building taxes shall then be levied. No deductions allowed in rate for which may be extended for educational purposes by reason of any rate extended for payment of bonds. Referred to Committee on Revenue.

House Bill No. 198. Van der Vries Provides that school districts having a population of 200,000 or less are authorized to issue six per cent bonds for teachers wages and for claims against the district in an amount which when added to existing indebtedness exceeds the statutory limitation (2½%) as to debt but is within the constitutional limitation. Provides for referendum. Recommended for passage with amendments by Committee on Education. House Bill No. 199. Van der Vries. Validates school district bonds issued under provisions in a law similar to that provided in H. B. No. 198 but upon which doubt was cast by Supreme Court. Recommended for passage by Committee on Education.

All of the above bills were introduced for the purpose of helping Cook County schools in their financial difficulties. During the next week a Committee from the House composed of Representatives Adamowski, Sinnott, Arnold, LeRoy M. Green and Roderick will journey to Washington to confer with Harry Hopkins, Federal Relief Administrator on relief questions. The committee has been asked to take up the matter of financial assistance for distressed schools in Cook County. According to the figures secured from County Superintendent Aken $262,000 is needed.

The relief problem still remains the major one in the deliberations of the Assembly.

The School Situation Is Critical

Springfield, Ill.—Just where Will County stands in the present school muddle in Illinois is revealed by some very pertinent statistics available to anyone who cares to make investigation. Cold figures, on file in the State House, show that:

Will county in 1931 received 71.2 per cent of the moneys due it from the State's common school fund whereas Cook county got 100 per cent; in 1932 Will county got only 61.6 percent while Cook county got 75.2 percent of its share. In 1933 Will county got a mere 60 percent while Cook county was getting 80.7 percent. This means that Will county, for the three-year average, got only 64.1 percent while Cook county was getting 85.1 percent.

No longer is there intense and heated agitation in Chicago over the "school situation". No longer are groups of teachers descending upon the banks or the offices of the school board. The Chicago newspapers are silent. All is quiet on the Chicago front.

This means that down-state counties are left to fight their school battles without help of the powerful influences that came to the rescue of the Chicago schools. But their abandonment is bringing a solidarity of action which down-state counties have never known in the past.

Members of school boards, parents, and other friends of the schools outside of Cook county are rallying, as never before, to make mass requests to the legislature for emergency legislation to relieve the critical situation their schools are facing.

These remember that Chicago, due to united effort, a solid front, and powerful political prestige, borrowed $23,000,000 from the federal government and met teachers' salaries in full. Many downstate schools owe their teachers for months and even years.

They remember that during the first two weeks of the present legislative session the "pegged levy" bill for Chicago was passed enabling the Chicago district to levy $43,000,000 for the present year regardless of rate limitations.

They remember that on the strength of this emergency legislation Chicago banks bought sufficient anticipation warrants to permit that city to continue to pay the salaries of its teachers, and other school employees, in full.

Crucial hardships continue in hundreds of downstate schools. Curriculums are being cut, teaching staffs have been slashed and school rooms are overcrowded. Teachers are being forced to accept warrants, and where the legal limit for warrants has been reached, to accept "orders" which, in many cases, have no present value and likely will never have any.

With the increase in state revenues, amounting to more than 100 percent in the last five years, mostly from non-property taxes and new sources, various state departments are gradually being restored to pre-depression salary levels. Friends of education are asking, "Why not help the down-state schools now?"

The Ladies Missionary Society will hold their March meeting in the church parlors, Thursday Pot-luck dinner will be served at noon.

Inaction Bad Feature Of Cook County School Situation

Springfield, Ill. Cook county's dominant forces, lulled to inaction and a false feeling of security because Chicago's school teachers are paid and the most of the county's schools are in operation, have failed to realize that the famine is not over in the rest of the state. Many down-state and Cook county suburban school boards still face critical problems.

Too, there is a general resentfulness against the administration of state finances because of certain facts, cold figures, on file at the State House in Springfield. Cook county, in 1931, received 100 percent of the moneys due it from the state's distributive school fund while downstate counties got only 71.2 percent. Cook county, in 1932, got 75.2 percent while other counties were getting but 61.6 percent. Cook county, in 1933, got 80.7 percent of its share of the state school fund while all other counties got a mere 64.1 percent of what was due them.

Because the school finance problems in Chicago seem to be temporarily solved agitation there for permanent financial school reform has all but stopped. Downstate counties, and Cook county outside of Chicago, feel that they have been abandoned and that they must carry on their battle without Chicago's powerful influences such as came to the rescue of its own schools. But their abandonment, as they see it, is bringing a solidarity of action which downstate counties have never known in the past.

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed." There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young physician, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" is in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is also won over. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary. Lanny visits her and Nance persuades her to smuggle out a letter which a confederate of Nance steals.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

For a moment she considered telephoning Dan McNamara, then decided the worthy fellow might prove an embarrassment. So she got a pistol from her bureau drawer—because she was a practical soul and dwelt alone. She had purchased the pistol as a precaution—and went to the door. She cocked the pistol, took a long breath, threw open the door suddenly and raised her weapon.

"Put 'em up," she commanded harshly.

"Don't be silly, Lanny dear," a soft voice entreated her wearily. "It's only me."

"Nancy Belden—you little devil," Lanny almost shouted. "Come in here this instant."

Nance Belden reeled in and Lanny closed the door behind her, turned the bolt, switched on the hall light—and screamed.

"Pipe down," Nance commanded, in that queer, faint, weary voice. "I'm not a corpse, but I'll tell the world I came mighty close to being one just before lock-up time this afternoon. Lanny, dear, I crashed the gate."

"Well, you'll crash out of here in a split second, you little hellion," Lanny cried sharply. "Wet as a dishrag and your hair like a witch's, and covered with blood. Where are you hurt?"

"Bullet through my left arm, high up near the shoulder. That guard could shoot, and he did! If my boy friend hadn't shot back at him and made him hunt his hole I'd be fishbait this minute."

"You've got to get out of here, Nance," Lanny was terrified. "How many visitors have you had since you've been in San Quentin?"

"Just you, Lanny."

"The authorities will look me up and they'll come here. Understand? They'll come here—there, they're on the telephone now. Oh, my good lord, what have I done to deserve this?"

She dashed into her kitchen and took down the telephone receiver. And again a masculine voice said:

"Miss Rebecca Lanning?"

Lanny controlled herself. "Yes," she said calmly. "Who's speaking?"

"Dan McNamara."

"Oh, hello, Dan. How are you?"

"Fine, Lanny. How's yourself?"

"Well, I might be dead for all the interest you've taken in me since you swallowed that good highball you grafted off me the day you came to Doctor Burt's office with that Nance Belden girl." She added archly—"you egg!"

Dan McNamara laughed. "Can I come out now?"

"The very idea. Of course not. It's almost ten o'clock and I'm just about to retire!"

"This is business, Lanny. I've got to see you at once."

"I didn't know the police were after me."

"The police aren't, but the chief is. Lanny, that Nance Belden escaped from San Quentin late this afternoon. She got to San Francisco all right. We know that because we found the speedboat she crossed the bay in tied up in the yacht harbor at the Marina. There was blood all over the cockpit and bullet holes in the hull."

"All of which proves, Dan, that God's in his heaven and all's well with the world. Are you seriously trying to recover the girl and send her back to the penitentiary?"

"I'm not. I'd give two of my big suck teeth to see her make a clean getaway. You know that. But the warden—naturally. It seems you visited Nance two weeks ago and smuggled a letter out for her and mailed it."

"Dan, I give you my word of honor I neither mailed a letter for her nor passed it to somebody else to mail. Nor did the girl discuss with me any plans for escape. If she had I would have told the warden, in order to prevent her escape. It wouldn't have been kind not to do so. The girl is mentally irresponsible and it would have occurred to me that, in any mad attempt to escape, a guard might shoot at her."

"Well a guard did, and he hit her, too. But he didn't stop her. Her outside gang opened on him with a Tommy gun from a speedboat off the point, and made him hunt his hole. Nance swam out to the boat under cover of their protective fire; they hauled her in and beat it forty-five miles an hour across San Pablo bay and headed up toward Carquinez straits, while daylight lasted. After dark they doused their lights and sneaked back. The warden telephoned Central office here and gave the alarm. I wasn't on hand, but of course the captain on duty had the water front covered at once. He had two men at the St. Francis Yacht club and they saw a speedboat sneak in and across the little harbor to a vacant berth on the Marina side. Before the cops could hurry across, the people in the boat jumped out and to a waiting car. The cops followed in a police car as soon as they could, but one of Nance's friends riddled their front tires with machine-gun bullets and the trail was lost."

"How exciting, Dan!"

"Yes, and it will be more exciting for you, Lanny. I got home about two minutes ago and my phone was ringing. It was central office trying to report to me. They're just starting a couple of dicks out in a cruiser to watch and see if Nance tries to make your house. You're a trained nurse. The warden's found out that much—matter of looking you up in the San Francisco directory. So he thinks that she'll head for your house to receive medical attention. She got hit, you know. And you must be a friend of hers—otherwise why did you call upon her?"

"Dan," said Lanny desperately, "she's here now!"

"Into your car with her, Lanny, and beat it out to my house with her." He gave her the address. "That's the last place on earth the devil himself would hunt for an escaped convict."

"I've just heard a thump and a crash in my living room, Dan. I think she's fainted. Telephone Doctor Burt to come to your home—that he will have to probe a bullet wound and dress it. Tell him to bring some whisky and two or three hot-water bags, and be on hand yourself to let me in. I can't leave here until I've mopped up any bloodstains she may have left on the sidewalk and my front steps. Good-by."

Dan McNamara Reached Into the Car, Lifted Nance Belden Out, Ran Up the Stairs and On to a Rear Bedroom. Lanny Jerked a Small Rug Off the Floor and Threw It on the Bed.

Lanny was right. Nance Belden lay on the floor of the living room in a faint. She picked the girl up in her strong arms and carried her down a short flight of stairs that led from her kitchen to the garage below. She heaved her into the car, ran back upstairs, got a wet mop, and by the light of the electric lamp over the front entrance searched for drops of blood. She found a few and followed them to the sidewalk, eradicating them with vigorous sweeps of the mop, then dashed back into the house, jammed on her hat and coat, ran outside again, threw open the garage door and backed her car out. She paused again, to shut it, then swung up the street as the half-red lamps of a police cruiser turned the corner. She swung wide to give it a clear berth, turned the first corner and spurted. She followed a zig-zag course until she felt sure she had thrown the police car off her trail—provided they had become suspicious and started to follow her; she turned up a residence street that she felt reasonably certain would not be patrolled by traffic officers at that hour of the night, and speeded up.

Dan McNamara was standing on the sidewalk in front of his house when she drew up. He reached into her car, lifted Nance Belden out and ran with her down an alley alongside the house to the basement entrance, which he kicked open. Lanny followed. Up the stairs to the kitchen the big chief ran, through the kitchen and on to a rear bedroom. Lanny jerked a small rug off the floor and threw it on the bed.

"Let her bleed on that for a while," she commanded. "No sense in messing this nice clean bed all up. There must be blood in my car, Dan. Take a wet towel and go out and clean it thoroughly, please, while I'm undressing this poor lamb. Get me one of your wife's clean nightgowns."

"Ain't got no wife, Lanny. Use one of mine."

"Just as good as any. Get it. Who takes care of you here?"

"My mother."

"Can she be trusted?"

"I've sent her to the country for a month," he evaded. "I'm sleeping here and eating downtown."

"God bless our home, Dan. Clear out—and watch for Stevie and let him in."

She ran to the kitchen, turned on the hot water and set an enameled skillet under the faucet; then returned, undressed the girl. In an adjoining bathroom she found clean towels and placed a cold one on her head. When she returned to the kitchen, the enameled skillet was sitting in the midst of a cloud of steam, so she knew it had been thoroughly disinfected; she filled it with warm water, carried it into the room and with a wet towel mopped the two holes in Nance's arm and examined the wound.

"Missed the bone," she decided. "Bled like a stuck pig, of course, piece of her dress probably carried into the wound."

In the medicine closet, Lanny discovered a small bottle of iodine. So she doused the wound with it, wrapped a cold towel around the girl's shoulder and tucked her into bed.

In the living room she found a brass box with cigarettes in it, so she lit one and sat down beside Nance, with her capable fingers on the girl's pulse. Evidently the count was satisfactory, for Lanny scowled at the girl and growled: "You little devil! And I crashed the gate," says she proudly. Well, if you aren't the little hell-bender! You've got the nerve of a lion-tamer!"

She found a comb and brush in Dan McNamara's bureau and combed and smoothed the dank, straggly black bob, and when that was done she unbent long enough to implant a kiss on the white brow. "Poor lamb!" she murmured. "Nobody's poor lost darling!"

The girl's eyelids flickered.

"Is that you, Lanny?" the girl murmured faintly.

"Yes, dearie. And you're all right, so don't worry. Nobody's going to take you back to San Quentin."

"The cops chased us at the boat landing, Lanny. Are you sure we shook them off?"

"Of course you did—the big boobs! Now, listen, dearie. I'm going to tell you something, but don't let it disturb you. Take my word for it you're safe. Do you remember Dan McNamara, the chief of police?"

"Of course. Old Daniel's my boy friend."

"Well, you're in his bed. The cops were on your trail, dearie. They suspected you might come to my house, so Dan tipped me off they were coming and to beat it with you out to his house."

Terror shone in the girl's dark eyes. "I'd never trust a cop that far," she wailed. "Oh, Lanny, you've let him make a sucker out of you." She began to weep hysterically.

"If you don't stop that," Lanny promised, "I'll bat you over the head with this skillet," and she picked that homely utensil up and shook it at Nance. "Dan McNamara's your friend."

"Yes, and chief of police, too, Lanny. I'll die if they take me back. They'll put me in the dungeon—I'm afraid of the dark."

"Shut up. You're not afraid of anything. You've got your little red badge of courage, you scaramouche! You afraid? My foot! Didn't you crash the gate and swim for that speedboat under fire?"

"Machine-gun fire, at that," Dan McNamara supplemented, from the doorway. "They opened on her and the boat from the towers." He came to the side of the bed and grinned down at the terrified girl. "Don't you worry, Nance. You're safe. I'm a cop, but I'm not without some sporting blood—your getaway earns three rousing cheers from old Dan McNamara." His big hand strayed over her face.

"You're a good old hunk of cheese," she assured him.

She turned her head toward Lanny. "Am I going to die, Lanny?" she asked. "Not unless I kill you—which I'm liable to do if you don't buck up and believe what I tell you. You've been shot but it doesn't amount to much. You'll be all right in a week or two."

"Then I'll be good, Lanny." The tired eyes closed and while Lanny stood by, wondering what to say next, Nance sank into a sleep of profound exhaustion.

"Let her alone until Stevie comes," Lanny suggested. "The wound has stopped bleeding. Come out into the living room and if you're as crooked a cop as you ought to be you've got liquor in the house and I've got to have a drink of it." Her middle-aged face was very serious.

BREEZY VEHICLE

When automobiles were first introduced to Cape Cod, some thirty years ago, an old sea captain was given a ride in one of the first cars, a high-sided contraption steered by the tiller that preceded the steering wheel.

"Well, captain, what do you think of her?" asked the proud owner and driver.

"Well," answered the captain, his face showing a puzzled look, "she's the first craft I ever seen that has a head wind no matter which way you p'inted her."—Boston Daily Globe.

ONLY DUMB ONES GET IN PEN SAYS PRISON CHAPLAIN

Unwanted children, divorces, the breaking down of the home, and the running wild of youth, were some of the conditions contributory to the delinquency of young men and boys and which eventually lands them in the penitentiary according to the Rev. Father Eligius Weir, chaplain of the Joliet penitentiary who gave an intensely interesting lecture on "Criminology" at the Mokena school auditorium Tuesday evening.

Father Weir stated that a large percentage of the prisoners are boys in their teens. He pointed out that, the gangsters seldom land in prison, because they are too slick and have protection from crooked politicians.

He said the more vicious crooks are on the outside of the penitentiary. They are not caught nor convicted.

Father Weir also decried the modern school system, saying that every effort is being made to cram the students with knowledge, but the moral and religious training is being left out.

The speaker told of the horrors attending the execution of murderers, and felt that life imprisonment would be more humane than capital punishment.

Father Weir made a strong plea for a return to better moral and religious standards as well as humanitarian principles.

Following the lecture, a splendid program was carried out by the group of entertainers Father Weir brought with him.

MOKENA

A fish fry will be held at Morry's Tavern Friday night and a dance is billed for Saturday night.

George Bennett and family are moving into the former Simon Ho-henstein dwelling on Front street.

Miss Anderson of Oak Park was a week end guest in the Evitt home.

A stopped up drain caused the basement of J. Groehendick's place to be flooded. When the tile along the street was dug up it was found that tiles ranging from 14 to 6 inches had been used and a pile of rock was found where the tile should have connected under a walk.

Frankfort-New

Lenox 4-H Club

The monthly meeting of the Frankfort-New Lenox 4-H Club will be held Wednesday April 3rd at the home of Fred Francis in New Lenox.

The last meeting was held March 6th at the home of Clyde and Harry Yunker. Dortha Eisenbrandt, gave a talk on "Selecting A Dairy Calf".
Harry Yunker, with the aid of Chester Ebert, demonstrated "How to Make A Rope Halter." Feed list prices were given out by Secretary-Treasurer, Fred Francis. After the meeting was adjourned, games were played and refreshments were served.

His Instructions

The broker was very sick, and at times delirious. In one of his lucid moments he asked the nurse what the last readings had shown his temperature to be. "One hundred and one,"
she said. "Good," said the patient.
"When it gets to 101½, sell."
